Community supports members in the workplace on issues including pay & conditions, health & safety, pensions and contractual disputes.

Community also helps members outside of the workplace and is involved with not-for-profit campaigns in your community.

Why join Community?

Community Union represents a new kind of trade union that supports our members at work and at home.

We have maintained a strong sense of social justice from all the unions which have joined to form Community Union, such as the National League of the Blind and Disabled (NLBD). This has resulted in our union developing new, more relevant ways to serve our members, their families & their neighbourhoods and investing in modern, environmentally friendly communication systems.

Community Union is a member-led and value-based union committed to improving the working and family lives of all our members and committed to campaigning on issues important to them.

Community has built relationships with charities and non-profit organisations further supporting our members as they seek to improve their communities.

Our core union values of Equality, Dignity, Respect, Fairness and Opportunity are key to informing all our policies and have led us, as a modern trade union, to address issues that are relevant to all workers no matter where they work or live, such as:

- Fair & Equal Pay
- Health & Safety
- Harassment & Bullying
- Discrimination

Community has also led the way in encouraging disabled people, women and minorities to become involved in their workplace and in their union.

Why join Community?

These values mean that Community will seek to work with employers to find solutions to problems.

As the recognised union in the NSPCC, Community will negotiate with senior management on national, regional & local issues such as pay and working conditions.

In your workplace, Community responds to the concerns of you and your colleagues. Community will only act with your support.

Becoming a member of Community will give you an independent voice in the NSPCC. As you join with hundreds of others across the country to negotiate pay and conditions, ensure a safe and secure working environment and build a representative structure based on dignity and respect.
